Special Items: Special items in the third quarter of 2015 relate to $1.1 million net mark-to-market adjustments for fuel hedges that did not qualify for hedge accounting treatment and which mature subsequent to September 30, 2015, offset by the effect of fuel hedges that settled during the quarter for which prior unrealized mark-to-market adjustments are now realized.

Fourth Quarter 2015 Outlook

The Company's expectations for the fourth quarter of 2015 are based on currently available information. These expectations are forward-looking, and actual results could differ materially depending on market conditions and the factors set forth under "Forward-Looking Statements" below. You should not place undue reliance upon these expectations.

Virgin America is scheduled to take delivery of three A320 aircraft during the fourth quarter of 2015, of which it expects to place two into operational service prior to year-end. The Company expects capacity, as measured by available seat miles, to increase by approximately 9.5 percent to 10.5 percent for the fourth quarter of 2015 as compared to the fourth quarter of 2014. Based on current revenue trends, the Company expects PRASM to decrease between 3.0 percent and 5.0 percent versus the fourth quarter of 2014. The Company expects CASM excluding special items, fuel and profit sharing to increase between 2.0 percent and 3.0 percent versus the fourth quarter of 2014. CASM excluding special items, fuel and profit sharing is increasing in the fourth quarter due primarily to Virgin America's previously announced pay and benefit initiatives that were implemented earlier in the year, partially offset by underlying unit cost improvement as the company resumes capacity growth.

Based on Virgin America's hedge portfolio and current market prices for aviation fuel products, the Company expects Virgin America's economic fuel cost per gallon inclusive of related taxes and hedge costs to average between $1.75 and $1.85 for the fourth quarter of 2015. This number may change depending on fluctuations in market prices for jet fuel during the quarter.
